

Southern Jet Launches Advanced Web-Based Training System

The RDU-based operator first FBO to launch Noverant's unique training solution.

Raleigh, NC - February 28, 2007 - Southern Jet, a nationally recognized FBO located at Raleigh Durham International Airport (RDU), has contracted with Noverant, Inc to provide the web-based Noverant Aviation Training and Verification solution (NATV). Initial phases will include on-line training for line personnel, administration and archival of corporate training records.

Adam Elkins, Southern Jet's VP of Operations, stated: "At Southern Jet, safety and customer service are our keys to success. NATV uniquely provides Southern Jet with a cost effective and efficient means of making sure all of our training initiatives are met without the need for continuous auditing of employee records. By implementing this web-based software, all our training documents are on-line so employees can stay current with: safety initiatives; specific job training requirements; new hire and existing employee information; and general corporate/administrative and recurrent training requirements."

By deploying NATV and contracting with Noverant to administer the service, Southern Jet can further enhance their first-class operation with additional safety and training initiatives - without additional resources to manage, administer or audit the program. The web-based software allows for 100% of training to be conducted on-line, utilizing a system designed to meet the guidelines for electronic signature as detailed, in 21 CFR Part 11.

"With NATV, Southern Jet employees take on-line training with assessments to ensure proficiency and comprehension," stated Elkins. "Once an employee completes the training, they provide a government-compliant electronic signature that certifies they have read and understood the training. These records are archived by NATV and can be viewed by management or the employee at any time, from anywhere in the world. In an industry where training is vital to ensure the safety of our employees, customers and the aircraft we manage, NATV gives me the confidence that our training initiatives are efficient and effective."

Jim Tringas, Dir. of Marketing at Noverant stated: "We've done significant research in the aviation industry, and Southern Jet is clearly a progressive FBO. Having been nationally recognized as one of the top five FBO's the past couple of years, they stand out as a model operator with a strong record of serving their customers with superior training and service. I commend their senior management for their leadership, focus and commitment to training, and I'm sure their customers, suppliers and underwriters also applaud their pioneering role in the industry."

NATV will provide Southern Jet with immediate and tangible savings to their overall training program and facilitate new unique training initiatives that are unprecedented in the industry.
