

Noverant offers free TSA Recurrent Security Awareness Training Easy Solution To Achieve TSA Compliance

RTP, North Carolina June 25, 2007

For Immediate Release

Effective today, the Noverant Aviation Training & Verification (NATV) web-based service will offer a training module – free of charge - that meets the TSA requirements defined in 49 CFR 1552. Noverant's solution is a TSA-compliant method for any pilot, flight training organization, CFI or FBO to complete the required training, safely archive the results and automatically receive future updates and expiration reminders.

Noverant, a leader in online training and information management services, was developed specifically for highly regulated government agencies and has just recently launched NATV into the aviation market. Noverant is providing this service to help introduce its web-based solution to the marketplace and help with the compliance and archival issues that are so common in the industry. NATV, through its 21 CFR part 11's e-signature verification, can offer government-approved archival and retrieval of all training records.

"So often in our industry, the challenge is not the actual training ... but answering basic questions: Where do I get it? When do I take it? How do I remember if/when it expires? Where do I keep track of what I've done? NATV manages all that for me and it keeps me 100% compliant all the time," stated Kirk Rabe, a CFI and charter pilot based in Raleigh NC. "NATV lets me archive everything, and notifies me when I need to take action - it manages the process for me. And the fact that it's all done online is a major time-saver since I can start the training in the office and finish it at home or anywhere with Internet access. It just makes good sense."

The NATV website (www.noverantatv.com) provides a link to our TSA-compliant training registration. After completing the registration process, or by emailing aviation@noverant.com with your full name and valid email address, you will be sent your username/password within one business day. Your training records will be stored in a highly secure data storage facility, and email notices of changes to the training, or automatic reminders of expiration, will be sent automatically to your email address on file. Additionally, users will always have the ability to print a verified transcript for their personal records.
